

Mastering the Art of Business through

Leadership Development

Great leadership doesn't happen automatically, nor does it happen overnight. Leaders must be groomed, developed and coached over time. The most effective organizations invest in their leaders, provide opportunities for continuous learning and clearly communicate the importance and benefits of leadership development.

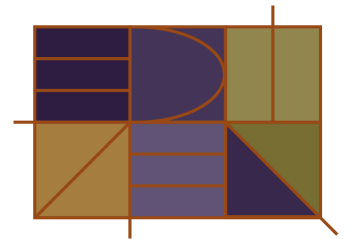

Edizen offers highly experienced facilitators to present programs to all levels of management from mid-level to senior, to help individuals enhance their capacity to lead people, set direction, and inspire others to move toward organizational goals.

Through a variety of on-line assessment tools, interactive exercises and practice sessions, participants...

- Discover their own strengths and areas in need of improvement
- Learn how to think and act strategically while fostering employee engagement
- Develop communication skills to promote the organization's mission, vision and goals more effectively

In today's uncertain economic environment, management's time is consumed by people who are fearful, who may be confused about their future and who may have less than positive attitudes and work performance. It is more important than ever to develop strong leadership to counteract low morale issues, to facilitate open communication and to maintain high levels of productivity. According to a recent Global Leadership Forecast, a majority of CEOs identified leveraging leadership as a top business priority.
